WASHINGTON, May 20—President Roosevelt declared today that the experiment of moving up the date of Thanksgiving day by a week to improve retail business had not worked and that next year Thanksgiving would be on the customary last Thursday in November.

Thus year, however, it will fall on the next to the last Thursday by presidential proclamation.

For the last two years, the date of Thanksgiving has been advanced by presidential proclamation a week ahead of the traditional last Thursday in November. Numerous states, nevertheless, adhered to the last Thursday holiday.

Mr. Roosevelt announced the decision to go back to the old date and joined with members of his press conference in a chuckle.

Originally, he said, a majority of retailers had thought sales would increase if Christmas and Thanksgiving were not so close together. So, as an experiment, the President said the date was moved up and the experiment did not work.

Now a majority of retail stores report, the President said, that the change in dates made little difference in sales.

It is too late this year to go back to the last Thursday in November, he said, because of commitments made to retailers and calendar makers.

IN THE PUBLIC DOMAIN

Perhaps nothing has disturbed Americans more than reports about European agents busily at work undermining hemispheric security from tentative island bases in the Caribbean sea. By the same token, the possibility that some of the islands might be taken over outright by such connivance as is being practiced between Berlin and Vichy finds them solidly in favor of leaving no opening for skullduggery.

All insular possessions in this hemisphere passing out of the control of their pre-war owners, such as the islands belonging to France, shall be in the public domain, the American republics have agreed. They will be held in trust pending the outcome of the war. There is no desire or intent to grab any territory, but there is firm intent to keep Germany from taking advantage of any unearned increment from its European conquests.

Nazi theory calls for the world to be split up into spheres of influence. The Nazis should be the last to assume any right to include Martinique, St. Pierre, Miquelon, and Guadalupe in their sphere of influence. It's unlikely they'd agree to let the United States have the Isle of Man, or Guernsey under similar circumstances.

THE HEART AND THE HEAD

China, which has suffered four years of exhausting war with no relief in sight trying to save itself from an invader, is the beneficiary of one of America's famous "weeks," running from May 18 to 25. Money obtained during this China week will be spent by seven major agencies that have been making relief available. Following the trend in collection drives of this nature, they are combining their efforts under the name of United China Relief.

It is argued sometimes that Americans are following their hearts, rather than their heads, in extending aid to the Chinese. Cold realism would seem to dictate—to some, at least—an agreement with Japan giving that nation a free hand in China in return for a promise to maintain amicable relations with the United States. But Americans are notoriously unrealistic about such things.

The Chinese have commanded their sympathy, not because of their place in the struggle to create new balances of international power, but because they are human beings who have fallen victim to a strong aggressor. The instinct that prompts most Americans to rally to the defense of the underdog has been appealed to; if the Chinese were invading Japan, there undoubtedly would be a Japanese week in the United States to alleviate suffering. It's part of the American way.

THE WAR OF CHARACTER

Recalling the generally known circumstances of the social revolution that gave rise to the Nazi movement in Germany, Americans are conscious of strong similarities in the news from France.

Plainly, in France as in Germany there is an attempt to bring into political and social dominance the forces of repression and discipline—to impose statism on a population with a heritage of personal freedom.

This is being done, significantly, with the aid of Frenchmen. Admiral Darlan currently is symbolic of the group inside France which aspired to create a totalitarian regime before the war. Every country has its martinet and autocrats, waiting for the day when they may become triumphant. The fifth column—a point often missed in weighing its threat—is a homegrown product. In the original source of the phrase, the fifth column was the minority in Madrid that undermined the city's resistance to the attack from the outside.

The Nazis have succeeded in every instance in finding persons sympathetic with their principles inside the countries marked for suppression. They had their quislings on the scene; they did not need to import them. Before the outbreak of war, they found kindred spirits in both France and Great Britain, and in event of a British defeat they undoubtedly could find enough sympathizers in the United Kingdom to set up a homegrown totalitarian organization.

This is a war of character, a conflict between those who have no faith in the composite intelligence of the governed and those who believe that authority must be derived from the people. The totalitarian state puts the people at the bottom of the political structure; the representative state puts the people at the top. It is an issue as old as the struggle for freedom and as universal as the character of human beings. Autocrats are not the exclusive product of any one nation. They exist everywhere; free nations suppress them.

GREAT BRITAIN'S MILITARY NATURE

Of this war it might be said, as it is said of many things wherein many things are revealed, that it is a liberal education.

An American, for instance, is having an opportunity to watch one of the great military spectacles of all time from a spectator's vantage point; his government, by the same token, is having the rare privilege of being able to profit by the costly experiences of other governments in the conduct of war.

Certainly one of the striking lessons taught by the war concerns the military nature of Great Britain from the viewpoint of the United States. The militarist always has seen the United Kingdom in the light any ordinary American now sees it—as the world's most formidable island base, admirably suited for ships and planes.

Entirely aside from all reasons of sentiment, the United States has a vital interest in the maintenance of Great Britain as a base of resistance to a hostile bloc of European powers. Britain has the same military significance to American security as the Hawaiian Islands have in the Pacific ocean. As long as the British Isles remain in control of a power with the will and ability to harass Germany, that militant nation will be confined to Europe, just as Japan will be confined to Asia as long as the Hawaiian Islands are controlled by the United States.

The attempt to rationalize aid to Britain by emotionalism is confusing at the best and, at the worst, disheartening. Moreover, it is wholly uncalled for. The best of all possible reasons in an era of dog-eat-dog is available. Great Britain is a military base of such tremendous importance by virtue of its position and resources that the United States cannot afford to let it fall into the hands of an unfriendly power. There is no other reason needed for the British aid policy. Any government that failed to take so obvious a step for the protection of the United States would be acting in betrayal of national interest.

THE STARS SAY:

For Wednesday, May 21

WHILE there may be a certain degree of enterprise and initiative in a business way on this day, there may be beset or irked by petty difficulties or trifling perplexities making social, domestic or sentimental urges more exciting. In fact the accent may be upon these private lures which should offer more harmony and real enjoyment. These too are under auguries for small anxieties or disagreements, calling for amiability and discretion. With all kinds of discords and frustrations cleverly managed a surprising gain may be shown.

Those whose birthday it is may feel moderate energy and ambition to engage in some enterprise or new venture, but may be discouraged by a chain of thwarting, perplexing or disappointing developments. This will make it easy to seek compensations in social, domestic, artistic or emotional indulgences, and these happy relaxations are of paramount importance. They may also be subject to inharmony, defeat or obstruction, unless real affability and discretion be exercised. Withal there may be some surprising benefits and gains.

A child born on this day should have energy, initiative and constructive ability, with artistic leanings, yet its emotional urges may lure it from the practical to the social and romantic way of life.

MENTAL TELEPATHY IN TWINS

Recent Studies Indicate Certain Affinity

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Is there such a thing as mental telepathy? Scientists have pooh-poohed the idea for years, but an eminent authority, Dr. Newman, Professor of Zoology at the University of Chicago, in his book, Multiple Human Births, states that the mental activity is associated with rhythmic localized changes in electrical potential, changes that are often called "brain waves," suggests the bare possibility that certain brain waves sent out by one brain might find some parts of another brain exactly attuned, and that mental telepathy might be a case of electrical induction in the same principle as radio.

Dr. Cledening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

features which have arisen from the study of twins.

Two twin sisters were in the same biology class. The teacher assigned as reading material some dozen books and said that the questions on the final examinations were to cover some material in these books. The twins were so busily occupied that they did not get around to reading these books until too late to read them at all.

Twins' Answer Alike

One twin read certain books and the other one read different books. On the examination the main question dealt with material that one girl claims to have neither read nor discussed with her sister. When she began to think about the matter, however, the answer came to her and she wrote it out without difficulty. This answer was so much like that written by her twin sister that the teacher suspected copying, but the girls had previously been unjustly accused of this and had adopted the practice of sitting far apart and they proved that they had done so on this occasion.

After the examination the principal called the twins into the office and he said, "Boys, your Latin papers are identical. The same words, the same syntax, the same grammar but, strangest of all, the same mistakes. But of one thing I am sure, you did not cheat. It must be because you are twins."

Subtle Affinity

Dr. Newman has asked one-egg twin graduate students who had been trained in science whether there is anything in these stories of mental telepathy. In spite of the fact that they were hard-boiled, scientifically trained men with critical minds, they strongly favored the view that there is some subtle affinity between one-egg twins that makes it possible for one to know what the other is thinking about.

Questions and Answers

E. M. B.—"If I have a bath every day and adds two cupfuls of epsom salts to the water, will it do any harm? I was told it keeps the weight down."

Answer—Yes, the injection treatment is very successful both for ordinary piles and bleeding piles.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Cledening has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp to Dr. Logan Cledening, 235 E. 45th st., New York. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation,"

"Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene," and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

B. S.—"Is sciatica curable by treatments or medicine? Does diet have any effect on the illness?"

Answer—Sciatica is a general nerve may be due to many things. It sometimes can be cured by manipulation or massage of the back or leg. The use of light and heat may relieve it. Removal of focal infection and as a last resort, injection of the sciatic nerve may be helpful.

H. G. J.—"Is there any cure for piles without operation? Also for bleeding piles?"

Answer—Yes, the injection treatment is very successful both for ordinary piles and bleeding piles.

"Lover Come Back"

by BARRETT WILLOUGHBY

CHAPTER THIRTY-ONE

The Captain, who had been staring speculatively into space, now repeated softly, "Bottled up — in Shaman's — Lagoon!" Then he turned to Kemp with a brisk, three days, he said? Give me those three days, Starbuck, before ye make any deal with Reynall. I'll be settin' a flea in Chris' ear which, it may be, will hatch some fish for ye before the three days are up. Should it not, then take over Reynall's surplus—if he has one! Will ye do me that as a favor?"

"I'll do it, Captain," Kemp smiled suddenly and got up, extending his hand. "And now, perhaps you can do me a favor, sir."

"Put a name to it, me boy."

"I'm scheduled to make a shipment on the T. K. K. liner sailing from Seattle in five days. Because of the strike, that shipment's still here on my wharf. The only way I can land it in Seattle on time is to get it aboard the freighter Makari, southbound out of Juneau tomorrow afternoon."

"But the Makari's not calling at Sitka."

"How well I know it!" Kemp smiled ruefully. "I thought they would, if I made it worth their while, so I sent Ikeda to Juneau by plane early this morning to arrange it. He just wired back he hasn't been able."

"Ikeda!" the Captain snorted scornfully. "Well, 'tis too late to fix it up now. Why the devil didn't ye come to me sooner?"

Kemp flushed. "I didn't think fast enough, sir. But it just struck me we might load the cases aboard the Tanya, and have her meet the Makari in Juneau. And, since you have business there anyway, I thought you might go along and —er—exert a bit of influence, if needful." He arched his eyebrows inquiringly.

The Captain nodded. "It could be done, if ye get busy at once with the loadin'. The Tanya must haul out on the beach for a tide or two, but the Windflower will serve as well. Ye'd best start your men loadin' her, right away."

"Then you'll do it, sir?"

"Aye. We'll sail from here about seven this evening, and be in Juneau fourteen hours later. Consider it done, me boy!"

He looked sharply at Kemp, who still lingered uncertainly by the table. "Well, well!" he said testily. "Ye've got about everything ye asked for, Starbuck. Why, then, do ye stand there lookin' as if ye'd just seen your best friend dumped over the side?"

He started for the front door, automatically searching his pockets for his cigarette case. Falling to find it, he whirled irritably about, and swore under his breath. "Darn! Must have left it upstairs."

He went back up the steps, his feet making no sound on the thick carpet. But at the top he halted abruptly and stood staring through the partly open door of the Captain's sitting room. The aperture was just wide enough to show O'Moore at his table, with the model of the Glory drawn close up before him. Sunlight fell on his bent silvery head, on the Lilliput ship—and on a full-yength plank, pulled straight out from the tiny vessel's hull, revealing a shallow draw.

The Captain, with a look of complete satisfaction on his old face, lifted several pieces of folded tracing linen from the drawer and, after inspecting each one briefly, replaced it. Then he gently pushed the drawer inward until, with an audible click, the plank snapped back into place.

Kemp's face was a mirror of mixed emotions as he realized what he had, inadvertently, spied upon. Making no sound, he turned and hurried from the house, his cigarette case forgotten.

"I promised Starbuck fish, and you've been swappin' him with water-hauls and excuses. And dy'e know who's going to take over the contract you couldn't fulfill? Reynall! Reynall, with his Thilinget egg-crates and rotten nets! Reynall can get fish! Reynall can fill his own cans and Starbuck's, too. But dy'e can't even—"

"Darn it, Cap'n!" Chris was almost in tears. "Reynall's got all those fish in Shaman's Lagoon to draw on: besides—"

"And why has he got 'em?" O'Moore's fist banged the table. "Because you couldn't see past your nose, Mister Sandvik. Because he could cripple O'Moore's whole fleet, smack under the eyes of O'Moore's dumb fleet commander. That's why his hell-dressed lagoon is now burstin' with herring. But Dan O'Moore's boats must go empty—and all because his fleet boss hasn't nerve enough to fill 'em. Bah!"

"All right! All right!" Chris leaped to his feet and pounded the table. "I'll show you whether I've got nerve or not! I'll bring Starbuck his fish—or nobody else will!" With that he slammed out of the room.

Sondra and her grandfather were about to sit down to an early dinner when the Forest Man appeared. He had just come from Cape Edgecumbe, he said, and he brought a basket of wild strawberries for Sondra. Though his clothes were travel-stained, and he looked as if he needed sleep, he yielded to Sondra's coaxing and stayed to dinner.

Delighted to have a new and appreciative audience, the Captain talked at length of his letter from the Secretary of the Navy, the recent strike, the turn of circumstance which was taking him now into Juneau. In rare spirits, he prolonged the meal until Alexander brought his bag and reminded him, "The Windflower, sir, is whistling for you."

The Forest Man went down with Sondra to see the Captain off. They found Kemp nervously pacing his float, where the Windflower lay, ready loaded. Though plainly anxious to see his cargo on its way, Kemp had a smile and a pleasant word for the Forest Man. "Just been admiring the Glory," he said. "I never saw a prettier set of sticks in a ship. You got them out, I believe?"

"Yes. They're all clear, straight-grained spruce. Such spars are hard to find, but they'll be harder to break."

A little group stood silent for a moment, all eyes upon the Glory of the West, lifting the tracery of her new masts and cross-trees high above her snowy hull.

"What a beauty she is!" Kemp exclaimed. His face, for a moment, had lost its harassed look. "It seems a shame her kind had to give way to steam and gas. But then we moderns must have speed."

"Speed hah!" the Captain ejaculated. "Give her a fair slant of wind, and the old girl yonder will show clean heels to anything in these waters, I'm tellin' ye."

Kemp smiled dubiously. "She has grand sailing lines, sir. But the Drakon there can reel out her fourteen knots or more, each hour of the twenty-four."

"Aye, and the Glory will sail three knots to her two—given a wind! Meself, I've logged her at nineteen knots, and she with more to give, had her masts and gear nodded to the Windflower's skipper, who immediately yanked a short blast from the whistle.

"Mistah Stahbuk! Mistah Stahbuk! Wait boat, please! Vancouver package!" Kemp's bookkeeper was running toward them, calling excitedly and holding aloft a small wooden box.

"Hold her, skipper," growled O'Moore. The bookkeeper came up, panting and thrust the little box at Kemp. "I think, please, you forgetting?" "Oh, yes! Thanks-Oshashi!" Kemp took the box and turned to the Captain. "This is a small special pack of herring I put up for a dear friend—a little old English lady in Vancouver, B. C. She's very fond of it, and I'd hoped to get this down there in time for her birthday—four days from now. But I guess it can't be done."

O'Moore reached for the box, whose lid, unnailed at one end, displayed oval tins neatly packed inside. "Let's see, now," he calculated. "From Juneau to Seattle on the Makari takes a good four days. Tis only a few hours, then, to Vancouver—but no. Twould be all of five days before it reached her."

"Confound it! I promised her—"

"I've wired ahead to the Makari's agent, and allis arranged. Starbuck. Do ye want I should bring Ikeda back with me on the Windflower?"

"Why—er—if he's ready to come, sir. He had a lot of things to do in Juneau. I'll wire him, of course, that you're bringing the shipment in."

"We'll be off then," O'Moore nodded to the Windflower's skipper, who immediately yanked a short blast from the whistle.

"Speed hah!" the Captain ejaculated. "Give her a fair slant of wind, and the old girl yonder will show clean heels to anything in these waters, I'm tellin' ye."

box open for customs inspection, as you see. But of course there's no customs agent — probably no postmaster, even at Taku Harbor. The Julia wouldn't take the box, unless all red tape—"

"Wouldn't she, now?" the Captain broke in, chuckling. "Me boy the master of that floatin' hotel is none other than Captain Jerry McGrath—and that melancholous Mick was born in the same County Clare that fostered the tribe of O'Moore! As one mariner to another, I'll be puttin' your small box into old Jerry's own hands for delivery—and devil an inch of red tape called for."

"That's fine, Captain! Really, it will mean a lot to my little old lady to get my present in time for her birthday."

"It's glad I am to be helpin' me boy. This card, nailed to the box—that's her name and address?"

"Yes, sir. Here—I'll just pencil the phone number on that. If Captain McGrath will call up when he gets in, someone will come right down after it."

"Better use my pencil—it's indelible." The Forest Man proffered a worn stub, and stood at Kemp's shoulder until he had finished and handed it back.

The Captain tossed the little box in beside his own bag on the pilot-house bunk. "So long, darlin'" he called to Sondra, as the Windflower breasted out from the float. "Remember—ye're admiral of the fleet whilst I'm away."

"I'll try to be just as mean a boss as you are, lamb!" Sondra tossed him a mock salute with one hand, and a kiss with the other.

Book And Leorians Clubs Observe Annual Guest Night

A delightful dinner and entertainment marked the annual guest night for Book and Leorians club members and their friends at the Masonic temple last night.

Long tables were decorated with individual colored vases filled with spring flowers and centerpieces of spring flowers. Small buff-colored booklets lettered in red announced the menu and program.

Mrs. Frank Bruderly, Book club president, welcomed the club members and guests. Group singing of "God Bless America" was led by Mrs. W. D. King, with Mrs. Charles Gibson accompanying.

Musical Program

Musical entertainment featured a group of numbers by the Salem Male Chorus, directed by Mrs. George F. Jones with Homer S. Taylor playing the accompaniment; and several violin solos by Miss Camille Firestone of Lisbon, accompanied by Miss Maxwell of Lisbon.

Miss Bernice Goetz of Cleveland, making her second appearance in Salem, gave an interesting account of her trip to the jungles of Ecuador and showed slides and moving pictures taken during the trip.

Miss Goetz, who has traveled extensively in South American countries, makes her trips alone except for the native guides and porters. Sailing from New York in October in 1938, she planned to visit Ecuadorian jungles to observe the natives of that region and their homes. On a trip which was to give her two weeks in the interior Miss Goetz found instead, four weeks of adventure, excitement and danger. The homes of two tribes of Indians were her goal—the friendly tribes

Deming Office Girls Hold Reunion

Deming Girls club entertained at a reunion party last night for girls who have worked in the office since 1925.

The affair, which opened with a dinner at the Elks home, will be an annual event.

A program followed the dinner, which was in charge of Mrs. Paul J. Smith, Mrs. George McConner and Miss Betty Kirchgesner.

The entertainment included:

Piano solo, Carol Ann King; vocal solo, Dorothy Krauss, accompanied by Geraldine Fickes; piano solo, Lois Riley; piano duet, Geraldine Fickes and Lois Riley. The door prize, flowers, went to Miss Marguerite Vincent. The reunion was held later in the evening.

The next meeting of the club will be held on June 19, the place to be announced later. Mrs. Lloyd Stackhouse, Mrs. Harold Hiscox and Miss Beulah Sell will be in charge of the meeting.

Quotarians Attend Party At Alliance

Several Salem Quotarians were among the 60 guests from Alliance, Canton, Akron and Salem at the inter-cities "Blossom Time" party at the Alliance Woman's club last night.

Miss Goetz was presented by Mrs. Irving Megrail.

Following the talk and pictures, Mr. Bruderly introduced Mrs. Howard Morgan, retiring president of the Leorians club, who thanked her club members, officers and committees for their cooperation during the year and presented the gavel to Mrs. John Holzwarch.

Officers Committees Named

Mrs. Holzwarch named her officers and committees as follows: First vice president, Miss Alberta Yengling; second vice president, Mrs. Leland Johnson, treasurer; Mrs. Katherine Welsh, assistant secretary-treasurer; Mrs. Charles Gibson, program chairman; Mrs. Robert Buckholdt, music; Mrs. Lionel Smith, hospitality; Mrs. Russell Moore, house; Mrs. Paul J. Smith.

The Leorians club members will be entertained by the retired and the new presidents during the summer. The date and place for the affair will be announced later.

In closing her year as Book club head, Mrs. Bruderly expressed her appreciation to members and officers for their interest and support during the season and presented the gavel to Mrs. A. H. Schropp, first vice president, in the absence of Mrs. C. L. Hartsough, president.

Arranging the party last night were Leorians, dinner, Mrs. Leland Johnson of the hospitality committee, Mrs. Henry Reese, Mrs. Frank Buckholdt, and Mrs. William Luce of the house committee; Book club, entertainment, Mrs. Carl Willman, Mrs. E. S. Vincent and Mrs. W. L. Hart of the program group and Mrs. W. D. King, Mrs. C. E. Donahay and Mrs. Carl Asmus of the music committee.

The annual meeting of the Book club will be held Tuesday, June 17, at the Salem Country club, opening with a luncheon at 1 p. m. Members who desire or can provide transportation are asked to call Mrs. L. P. Koeneich, chairman of the hospitality committee.

the effect of swinging Russia away from the Nazis, at least far enough to insure that the Soviet wouldn't give active support to Hitler.

It needs only half an eye to see that this enforcement of Japanese and Russian neutrality would be a terrific blow to the Axis powers. Apart from other aspects it would release strong British naval, military and air forces in the Far East for use in Europe and Africa.

By the same token, if the Axis operations should force the United States into the war, we also should be able to employ units from our Pacific fleet in the European theatre. It would be a Godsend to be able to get ahead with the big show and not have to worry about the Orient.

between France and the rebels", the information office said, adding that complete French sovereignty "must be established" over the lost territories.

Nazi Share Not Hinted

There was no indication of how this statement might be linked with the German-French collaboration plans. There have been rumors in Vichy for some time that the Germans have been pressuring France to attempt to reestablish control of her colonies as one of the terms for agreement.

France has a large and well-equipped army stationed in North Africa under General Maxime Weygand which presumably would be called upon in any attempt to regain the colonies now held by the De Gaulleists.

defense councils, the chief executive declared, will be assisted in setting up plans.

Work With Home Guards

The job of arranging protection for life and property, Mr. Roosevelt said, involves the tying in of the new home guard units, created in many states to take the place of national guard companies called to federal service. The home guard, Mr. Roosevelt indicated, will help defend all public property, organize fire departments and plan for the physical protection of key points against bombing.

One duty of the civilian defense office will be to train civilian auxiliaries, the President said, and in that connection he said he wanted the selective service office to cooperate in supplying names of persons who would like to help their country but have been put so far down on draft lists they are unlikely to be called to military duty.

People of this type, he said, would include men with dependents whom they must continue to support but who could spare some time for civilian defense activity on a voluntary basis.

Another duty will be to stimulate national morale and arrange for civilian participation, Mr. Roosevelt said, and women's organizations will be used in this field.

POPPY DAY WORKERS COMPLETING PLANS

Organization of the corps of volunteer workers who will distribute memorial poppies here on Poppy day, Saturday, is being completed by the American Legion auxiliary.

The corps, working under the leadership of Mrs. Elwood Calvin, Poppy day chairman, will be on the streets throughout the day offering poppies to be worn in honor of the World War dead, and to aid the disabled veterans and dependent families of veterans.

Warner Baxter and Susan Hayward in "Adam Had Four Sons" at the State Wednesday and Thursday.

Ingrid Bergman and Warner Baxter have the featured roles in the dramatic "Adam Had Four Sons," showing at the State Wednesday and Thursday.

Based upon the absorbing novel by Charles Bonner, "Legacy," a best seller a few seasons ago, the picture has much to recommend it—probably the finest screen work Warner Baxter has done in his long screen career, a splendid performance by Ingrid Bergman and outstanding work by Susan Hayward, Fay Wray, Helen Westley, Richard Denning, Johnny Downs, Robert Shaw and Charles Lind.

Team leaders, or sub-chairman, will include Mrs. James Helm, Mrs. Ray Cuthbert, Mrs. Everett Rich and Mrs. Harold Wykoff.

More than seven million pounds of molybdenum were recovered from copper ores and concentrates produced in 49 U. S. mines in 1939.

Dodgers Protest Two Chicago Games To President Frick

CHARGE CUBS HAD MORE THAN LEGAL NUMBER ON SQUAD

Outfielder Charley Gilbert, Player In Question, Has Never Seen Chicago

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sports Writer
First-place jams in the National league are as common as traffic tie-ups in Times square, but the senior circuit has one now that only President Ford Frick can untangle.

The Brooklyn Dodgers have lost two games in a row at Chicago and yesterday slipped out of the percentage lead although remaining half a contest ahead of the St. Louis Cardinals on won-lost reckoning.

However, the Dodgers complicated this otherwise commonplace mixup by protesting both games on the grounds that the Cubs had 26 men on their squad, one over the limit that went into effect May 15.

The player in question is outfielder Charley Gilbert, whom Brooklyn traded to the Cubs in the Billy Herman deal. He was playing under option at Montreal and the deal provided that the International league club turn him over to the Cubs June 1.

Never in Chicago

In the meantime he sprained an ankle and went to Philadelphia to get repairs. He never has been any closer to Chicago than he is right now—roughly 600 miles.

President Frick says it may be a week before he can make a ruling.

If the Cubs, who moved into first division yesterday, don't cut off a man, and the protest is upheld a week from now, other managers may start hollering too. On the other hand the Dodgers will have to show why and how Gilbert can be included on the Cubs' roster 10 days before they themselves were due to deliver him.

Even if Brooklyn wins the protest it won't erase the humiliation of yesterday's 14-1 wallop.

Cleveland's American league leaders also were bumped off again by the Philadelphia Athletics, 5-4, although Al Milnar, the Indians' southpaw ace, homered with one on. Rookie Les McCrabb kept nine hits well-spaced and was supported by a 12-hit offensive led by Frank Hayes.

Galehouse Hurts 4 Hitter

Dennis Galehouse, who had pitched a one-hit shutout his last time out, held the New York Yankees to four safeties as the St. Louis Browns forged a 5-1 victory.

Young John Gorski pitched four-hit ball for the Detroit Tigers to beat the Boston Red Sox, 4-2, missing a shutout in the seventh when Ted Williams homered with one on. It was Detroit's fifth straight win and kept the American league champs right on the heels of the second-place Chicago White Sox, who whipped the Washington Senators, 8-2.

The day's best pitching duel was in the National league where Pittsburgh ended the New York Giants' four-game winning streak, 2-1. Max Butcher of the Pirates allowed only four hits while old Carl Hubbell gave up six.

The Cincinnati Reds ripped off 14 hits to beat the Boston Braves, 7-3, behind Johnny Vander Meer, with Catcher Ernie Lombardi distinguishing himself by throwing out four runners at second. There were seven errors.

Breezy Briefs Of Sport From Brietz To You

BL EDDIE BRIETZ

NEW YORK, May 20.—(The Special News Service)—Mid-Western papers report that a full-fledged campaign is on to oust every athletic head at the University of Illinois, including Bill Zupke.

Tommy Harmon won't play football with the pros, but he's not averse to playing against 'em—if the fee is fat enough.... Joe Cronin, tearing a page from Bill Terry's book, has barred the press from the clubhouse after the game. But no one is fretting. If the Sox keep going like they did last week, the scribes will see all they want of them on the field.

Poor Old Bobo

The fans are asking if and when Buck Newson's going to ride again; it seems the Tigers' favorite son. So far this year, he and two have won, which may be why the gossips say He bluses when he draws his pay.

Caught on the Fly

Of the six leading hitters yesterday in the two big leagues, four were shortstops — Travis, Jorgens, Cronin and Vaughan.... And those who think the Reds are through: Jimmy Wilson.... Lots of folks are wondering why the Cubs won't try to make a first-sacked out of Dizzy Dean.... Penn Military Institute will confer a degree of Doctor of Physical Education on Connie Mack June 10 and it couldn't happen to a finer gentleman.

National Open King Entered

Sam Parks of Pittsburgh, the 1935 National Open king, is among the early entrants, along with a host of the newer "big name" stars such as Sam Snead, Ben Hogan, Byron Nelson, Dick Metz and Clayton Heafner.

From Youngstown, 16 of the "great brigade" will move over to Toledo for the seventh annual Inverness Invitational four-ball matches, where the eight pairs will play June 19 to 22 and then split up a $7,000 pot of gold.

In that tourney each pair meets each other twosome in an 18-hole best-ball round. For each hole won a "plus' 1" is given the victor while the loser gets a "minus 1." At the finish the pair with the greatest "plus" gets $2,000, the second places get $1,200, third $900, fourth $700 and then the prize drops $100 for each place until the team finishing in the cellar winds up with $300, or $150 for each man. Since all expenses for the golfers are paid by the tournament committee, the last placers are assured of $37.50 per day, plus board, room and entertainment.

All Present Day Stars to Play

The touring tournament stars will, within the next 30 days, take $12,000 in prize dough — which "ain't hay" — from two Buckeye classics.

First on the list is the Mahoning Valley's $5,000 Open at Mahoning Country club, near Youngstown, it's scheduled June 13, 14 and 15, over 72 holes of medal play, the week after the National Open down in Texas.

Practically all the top-notchers are expected to make a bid for the money, for Tom Raklets, the home pro, is expecting a field of about 2000 professionals and amateurs.

The pairings for the $7,000 meet are: P. G. A. Champion, Byron Nelson and Jimmy Thomson; Horton Smith and National Open Champion Lawson Little; Big Ed Dudley and Johnny Bulla; Lloyd Mangrum and Harold (Jug) McSpaden; Dick Metz and Clayton Heafner; Ben Hogan, leading money winner, and Jimmy Demaret; Henry Picard and Johnny Revolta, and Sam Snead and Ralph Guidahl, two-time winner of the National Open.

On top of those "big money" events, the State Open, for which the date and site have not been selected, is expected to have a price list of around $2,000.

ZAMZAM SUNK, BUT ALL ABOARD SAFE

Passengers, Crew Landed In German Territory, Berlin Reveals the most exacting regard for all international agreements," a spokesman said.

The ship carried contraband intended for the enemy. German naval units observed every regulation in meeting the situation.

"It might be called a perfect example of the war on sea commerce carried out according to regulations."

The ship was carrying 24 American ambulance drivers and 20 ambulances from New York to Alexandria for service with the British and "Free French" forces in Africa. In all, 138 Americans were aboard.

Germans quoted the American and British press in which the sinking of the ship was called an instance of Nazi barbarism or the beginning of unrestricted sea warfare.

"Humane" Destruction

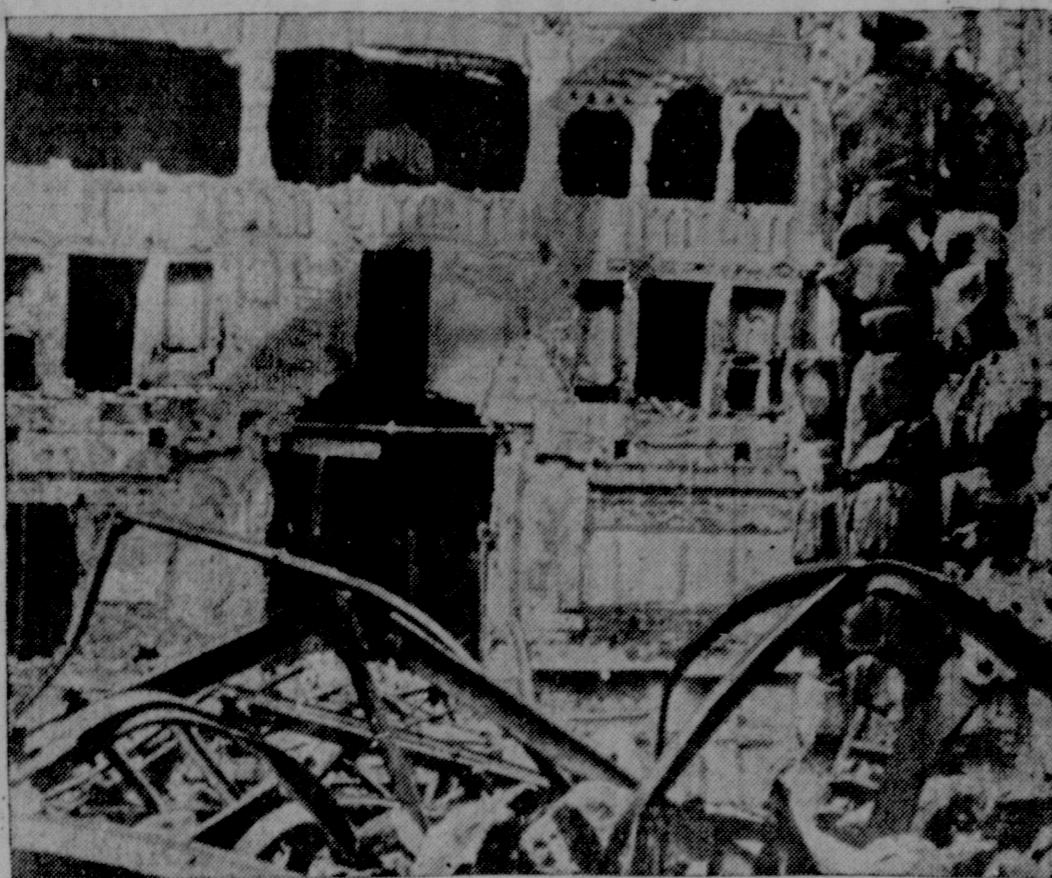

The facts show that it was anything but the kind, indeed it was an instance of the most humane and legal destruction of a vessel which was bringing most valuable supplies to the enemy," a spokesman said.

The Germans did not say where in occupied territory the crew and passengers were taken. Nor would they say where the sinking occurred.

A question whether the Zamzam was destroyed by U-boat, the spokesman said "It's hardly to be assumed that a submarine could take hundreds of survivors aboard."

The Germans added nothing to reports abroad that the Zamzam carried men and equipment to a British-American ambulance unit.

New Photo Shows How Nazi Bombs Ripped House of Commons

The extensive damage created by Nazi bombs in London's house of commons is seen in this original picture, flown to the United States by Atlantic clipper.

It was stated, however, that the most careful inquiry established that the ship was loaded with large quantities of goods listed as contraband.

It was understood here that war materials aboard were intended for General Charles de Gaulle's "Free French" forces, probably in some colony.

"The excited comment in Anglo-Saxon lands (over the Zamzam) is a fine example of irresponsible war agitation without regard to facts," one source said.

United States copper mines in 1939 recovered as by-products from copper ore, 429,496 ounces of gold and 13,138,000 ounces of silver.
